
ERA is dead

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Equal Rights Amendment in Missouri is dead for a third year, but backers say they'll work through the 1976 elections to replace those state senators who voted Monday to defeat ERA.

"I think they (the Senate) made a lousy decision," said Rep. Sue Shear, the measure's sponsor, after the 14-20 vote. "We'll just have to get out and work for it again."

The amendment, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex, had the backing of Gov. and Mrs. Christopher S. Bond, Senate President pro tem William Cason and even Mrs. Betty Ford. But that support and the intensive, daily lobbying by ERA proponents was not enough to overcome the individual feelings which had succeeded in defeating the amendment since 1973.

It was defeated in the Missouri House two years ago and died in a committee in 1974. It narrowly cleared the House Feb. 6, giving the Senate its first chance ever to consider ERA.

The amendment has been ratified by 34 states, but there are legal questions about two states which subsequently rescinded the ratification. For the amendment to become part of the U.S. Constitution, 38 states must approve it by the spring of 1979.

"There's no preference for veterans under the merit system if these broads have their way," said Sen. William Webster, as he and Cape Girardeau Democrat Albert Spradling discussed the amendment.

The Carthage Republican noted that the National Organization for Women (NOW) was behind ERA and that that organization was in favor of abortion on demand.

He said that if ERA were approved nationwide, NOW's recommendations would become the regulations used by Washington bureaucrats in charge of enforcing the amendment. Both of the veteran senators agreed that the amendment would have a detrimental effect on the nation's armed forces, religion and family life.

Although it took nearly two hours for the Senate to come to a final vote on ERA, most of that time was spend on the Spradling-Webster discussion rather than debate.

Webster admitted that he was "buying some time" to be sure enough opposition senators were in the chamber when the issue came up for a vote. The two veteran senators ended their delaying tactics when two more opposition members arrived in the chamber, sealing ERA's doom.

A few minutes after word spread that the Senate had taken up consideration of the amendment, the chamber's galleries began to fill, mostly with secretaries working in the Capitol.

Cason, a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor, said ERA was "the most misunderstood bill to be before the General Assembly," and that opponents had "been using the tool of fear" in fighting its passage.

Shear, a Clayton Democrat, said there will not be a concerted drive to pass ERA again in Missouri until after the 1976 elections. She said that a coalition of 65 groups that campaigned for it would work to replace ERA opponents with lawmakers favorable to it.

Eileen Plassmeyer, chairman of the Committee for the Protection of Women and Children, said her anti-ERA group "will be ready for it," if there's another drive to approve the amendment.

"We will scrutinize other legislation that touches on the same area," Mrs. Plassmeyer said. "We're going to oppose anything that touches on areas that ERA would have touched."

She said that church groups were the key in lobbying efforts against the amendment this yearr.

"The churches got involved in something when they saw it was going to weaken the family unit," she said.

If those on both side of the issue keep their promises, the Capitol will again be the scene of heavy lobbying, which this year included telephone calls from First Lady Betty Ford.

Council wades through applications for licenses

The City Council Monday night waded through a tangle of applications for alcoholic beverage licenses and found confusion over who was applying for each license.

Jim Williams, who had asked for a five per cent beer license at the Wagon Wheel, a tavern he operates at 849 W. Malone Ave., told the council he had asked for the application because he thought he was going to be evicted and wanted a license application before the council in case he had to move.

However, since he had not received an eviction notice, he wanted to withdraw the application.

One councilman told Williams he understood that the new owner, Larry Miller, had already issued an eviction notice. Miller is also asking for a five per cent beer license for the Wagon Wheel.

The council allowed Williams to withdraw his request and rejected Miller's because he did not have a building ready for occupancy.

Pat Summers asked the council for a five per cent license for the Rustic Rock Restaurant, saying she was seeking to buy the property. She asked that the application be tabled until she has a chance to buy the building.

However, Marvin Roberts and Raymond Williams are seeking a five per cent beer license for the same building. The council also tabled their application.

The five per cent license held by the former manager of the Rustic Rock, Charles Copeland, was revoked following a public hearing. The license was revoked because Copeland had been out of the building for three months and has not found a new location to do business.

Other applications considered included: Dewayne Reeves, Liberty Supermarket, 142 N. Ranney St., five per cent beer, tabled; Kattie Huggins, Bee Hive Cafe, West Malone Avenue, 3.2 per cent beer, approved; R.E. Winchester, War Drum Restaurant, Highway 62 East, liquor by the drink license, approved.

In other action, the council approved the adoption of a uniform traffic code. Adoption of the code makes Sikeston's traffic laws consistent with the laws of other communities in the state which have adopted the code.

The major changes in the code will allow first offenders to pay fines pre-established by the court at the police station instead of appearing in court.

The law also covers the city's stop signs. There had been some question whether or not all stop signs in the city were covered by city ordinance.

2 Gunmen rob Dudley couple

DUDLEY--The Stoddard County Sheriff's Department is searching for two white males who robbed Mr. and Mrs. Glen Harrison at gunpoint Monday night in their home on Route One and fled with several thousand dollars worth of cash, clothing and valuables.

According to the Harrisons, two men wearing masks and carrying pistols entered their home about 11:30 p.m., handcuffed them and forced them into a bedroom while they proceeded to ransack the house.

Taken in the robbery were a $25,000 savings certificate, $1,000 in cash, numerous items of clothing and silver, a wallet, watch and all the keys the Harrisons had in their possession. Authorities said the savings certificate was non-negotiable.

According to a spokesman for the sheriff's department, the men were equipped with walkie-talkies and had a third man standing by in a pickup truck. When they finished the robbery, the two masked men radioed the third man, who picked them up in the truck, which was last seen headed west on Highway 60 toward Poplar Bluff.

No injuries were reported.

Dexter airs city manager issue

DEXTER — "I hope the people of Dexter won't make the same mistake we made at East Prairie," Ken Whittington, a former East Prairie resident, told the City Council Monday night. "A city manager form of government will not work," he stated. "If you don't believe me, go to the citizens of communities with this type of government and ask them.

"If the voters approve this form of government you will have it for six years, like it or not," Whittington said.

"A city manager will cost the city from $19,000 to 25,000 annually in salary, not including a full-time secretary, office and a liberal expense account," Whittington continued. "A city manager is not hired under contract and can be hired and fired at will by the Board of Aldermen.

"It's a big rip-off," he said, "which in a few years can result in a small clique running the city. The five aldermen will not necessarily be from any one section of the city and can live in the same house or the same block."

"If the city manager has no power," Mayor Willis Conner asked Whittington, "What's the use of having one?"

"He is not needed," Whittington replied.

Conner then pointed out that the city manager's office at Sikeston cost the city about $33,500 during the 1973-74 fiscal year. In comparison, he said the entire government of the city of Dexter cost only $14,887.50.

A public meeting sponsored by the Citizens Betterment Committee has been tentatively set for June 10 to acquaint Dexter residents with the city manager form of government. City

Garbage billing is confusing

NEW MADRID — A request for a liquor-by-the-drink license was approved and park improvements and garbage disposal problems were discussed at the city council meeting Monday night.

Roy Allen Boyd was granted permission to obtain a liquor license for the premises at 309 Main St., provided that he comply with all state, county and liquor department requirements. The building was formerly occupied as a drug store.

In his report to the council, City administrator Don Lloyd said that no funds had been received from the Department of Housing and Urban Development in connection with the city's matching funds park construction and improvement project.

He said the city has been approved for $60,000 in matching funds, but the first request, totalling nearly $29,000,has not been received because a copy of the deed from the New Madrid County R-1 Enlarged School District board for the O'Bannon school park is required by HUD before the funds will be released. The council was advised by City Attorney Hal Hunter Jr. that the deed was completed and signed and ready to be submitted.

The council discussed a confusion among some merchants concerning billing for

JWC supports sales tax

The Sikeston Junior Womens Club voted 23 to 7 Monday night to support the proposed one per cent city sales tax.

The vote came following a talk on the tax from Bill Welborn, executive secretary of the Sikeston Area Chamber of Commerce.

Electricity rate to increase

The Scott-New Madrid-Mississippi Electric Cooperative has announced a six per cent cost of power increase being added to electric bills of its members, beginning with bills received Aug. 1.

The cooperative said the rate increase is necessary because of a 10 per cent increase in the cost of wholesale power purchased from M&A Power Cooperative in Poplar Bluff. The increase becomes effective in July.

Optimists support sales tax

The Sikeston Optimist Club voted unanimously Monday to support the proposed one per cent city sales tax.

The vote came after City Manager Charles Church made a short talk on reasons the city needs the tax and how the revenue would be used.

11 hurt in SeMo accidents

A Fredericktown man suffered serious injuries and 10 persons received minor injuries in four area traffic accidents Monday, the highway patrol reported today.

A Fredericktown man was seriously injured and two other Fredericktown residents received minor injuries in a two-vehicle accident at 8:55 p.m. Monday one mile south of Mine La Motte on Route OO.

The patrol reported the accident occurred when an eastbound car driven by Milton Allison Benny, 29, of Fredericktown failed to stop at a stop sign and pulled into the path of a southbound pickup truck driven by Mary Louise Tinsley, 40, of Fredericktown.

Benny received serious injuries and Mrs. Tinsley and her son, Michael Ledon Tinsley, 18, of Fredericktown, received minor injuries. All three were taken to Madison County memorial Hospital at Fredericktown.

Three persons received minor injuries in a single-vehicle accident at 3:15 p.m. Monday two miles north of Campbell on Highway 53.

The accident occurred when a northbound pickup truck driven by Betty Lou Kimbrow, 45, of Kennett ran off the right side of the road and struck a bridge abutment.

The driver and two passengers, Edwina Lee Kimbrow, 7, and Gwendolya Lee Kimbrow, 11, received injuries and all three were taken to a private physician in Poplar Bluff.

Four persons received minor injuries in a two-car accident at 6:40 p.m. Monday on Old Highway 160 one mile east of Doniphan.

The accident occurred when a westbound car driven by Jimmy Newell Brown, 35, of Glencoe, Ark., came around a curve on the wrong side of the road and struck an eastbound car driven by Marian Jane Hodo, 18, of Cape Girardeau.

Mrs. Hodo and three passengers in her car, Nona Holcomb, 39, Carol JoAnn Jones, 39, of Donipahan and William R. Hodo, her one-year-old son, received injuries and were taken to the Ripley County hospital.

Evelyn J. Dickinson, 21, of Piedmont Route Three received minor injuries in a one-car accident at 9:30 p.m. Monday on Route B three miles east of Piedmont.

The accident occurred when the westbound car she was driving ran off the road and overturned.

"KINDNESS" COMPARED TO WHAT?

The ironically named "Human Kindness Day" held in Washington, D.C. earlier this month was a bitter but timely reminder of the potential for massive trouble if strict security measures aren't in force when millions of innocent tourists troop to Washington for Bicentennial events.

"Human Kindness Day" draw a crowd of 125,000 to a rock concert on the mall near the Washington Monument. When the merrymaking was over, there had been 500 reported robberies — most involving assault — and 86 persons injured. One of them, Steven Laine, the director of public affairs at the Department of Agriculture, was stabbed in an eye that doctors say he'll lose. Mr. Laine was simply passing through the crowd on his way to work when he was attacked.

Despite the terror and carnage, one of the organizers, Carol E. Kirkendall, told the Washington Post that "Human Kindness Day this year was an unbelievable success, beautiful and happy." Miss Kirkendall represents a group called Compared to What Inc., which co-sponsored the bizarre affair. One can only wonder in amazement how it showed "human kindness" and compared to what was it "beautiful and happy?"

Supporters of the Concert argue the most participants were law-abiding and it was roving bands of young blacks who committed the crime.

To accept that explanation is to overlook at least three crucial lessons from Human Kindness Day: first, the marauding thugs were abetted if not aided by hundreds of others in the crowd who refused to raise their voices in protest. Second, the ugly fact must be faced that the crimes were largely racist, with blacks attacking and robbing whites. Third, the event was co-sponsored by the National Park Service, whose planning and execution of crowd control obviously were wholly inadequate.

We are still waiting to hear a word of explanation from the White House. People have a right to know what officials in the capital are doing to ensure that thousands of other Americans aren't treated the same way when they journey to Washington this summer and next.

If you share our concern, letters to your congressman and senators might help produce some answers.

U.S. IN THE LONG VIEW

Seventeen years after America's first space satellite went into orbit (has it really been that long?), Americans can buy a photographic map showing what their entire country looks like, on the even of its 200th anniversary, from about 570 miles out in space.

The black and white mosaic of images taken by NASA's LANDSAT-1 earth resources survey satellite has been printed in 29x41-inch size by the U.S. Geological Survey using parts of 595 pictures taken by LANDSAT-1 between July and October, 1972.

Two versions of the U.S. mosaic are available. One is from images made in a visible band of the spectrum Band 5) that accentuates urban areas and other works of man. The other is from images made in infrared light (Band 7) that accentuates water and topographical features. Both versions have state boundaries outlined with broken white lines.

Copies may be ordered prepaid for $1.25 each from the Branch of Distribution, U.S. Geological Survey, 1200 South Eads Street, Arlington, VA 22202. Orders should specify either Band 5 or Band 7.

ONE VOICE IN A WILDERNESS

Nearly five years ago, when Israel was on the verge of administering a stunning defeat to the armies of Egypt and Syria, an alarmed United Nations demanded and imposed an immediate cease-fire.

Yet today, in the face of the almost incomprehensible human tragedy unfolding in South Vietnam, the so-called world parliament and so-called world opinion remain totally, completely, absolutely silent.

No U.N. delegation calls for the invader to adhere to the 1972 Paris peace accords. No students, in any country, are burning down buildings to express their outrage over the killing.

To its credit, the World Council of Churches is one of the few international organizations to have reacted in the name of humanity. Through its more than 250 member-churches in 90 countries and territories, the WCC has launched an appeal for an initial $1 million to aid South Vietnamese refugees.

This is less than one dollar for every newly displaced and dispossessed South Vietnamese and as nothing compared to the vast billions both sides have poured into making war.

Even so, given the curious unconcern with which the world seems to be watching the Vietnamese tragedy, one wonders if the council will realize even a fraction of its modest goal.

A MATTER OF PUBLIC SUPPORT

With increasing frequency those who discuss ways and means of meeting future energy demands stress the importance of public support for measures and policies that will speed the development of energy programs. For example, an executive of a typical power company has described the delays resulting from bureaucratic action throughout the licensing process of a nuclear plant it is building. These delays have run the cost of the plant up from $300 million to over half a billion dollars.

The company has been required, among other things, to compile reports that occupy "...several feet of shelf...." and many volumes for official bodies. It has been instructed to provide some 300 sets of these reports to scientists, engineers and various members of governemnt regulatory agencies such as the Atomic Energy Commission. Countless man-years of time will be required just to read and analyze the volumes. Environmental restrictions have been carried to a point where coal, the nation's most plentiful fuel, is permitted to produce less than 20 percent of the total energy consumed annually in the U.S. This intensifies the mounting pressures on oil and natural gas. The utility executive observes that our nation has the resources and skill "...to come out of our present dilemma and obtain adequate energy supplies and a safe environment, but we cannot achieve this orderly approach without public opinion to provide the support our legislators need."

There must be public support for prompt measures in behalf of tomorrow's energy requirements. The energy shortage is not incurable. It is mostly a matter of public inertia and a take-it-for-granted attitude of a society that has never felt the harsh reality of existing without the push-button conveniences of contemporary life.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST

Not long ago, the Washington Post disclosed that the highway lobby had accomplished legislative miracles by spreading around some $134,000 to the 1974 campaigns of 126 House candidates and 10 senators. The contributions paved the way for passage of controversial special interest legislation that permitted truckers to operate larger, heavier trucks on the interstate highway system. But the Post story dealt with small potatoes, as Reed Larson, executive vice president of the National Right To Work Committee, pointed out. In a Washington press conference ignored by most of the major news media, Larson disclosed that members of the House Education and Labor Committee received campaign contributions last year amounting to nearly half-a-million dollars from organized labor.

And these reported gifts, Larson stressed, are only the tip of the iceberg. "They do not include the additional hundreds of thousands of dollars which Big Labor organizers routinely provided to candidates in manpower and services."

"Under the circumstances," Larson charged, "There is no way this committee, as a whole, can objectively sit in judgment of legislation which would grant additional powers and privileges to the men who gave them all that money.

Of the 39 members of the House Labor Committee, 33 received union aid last year (see chart below). Token contributions were made to a number of Republicans, the vast majority of labor's largess went to Democrats.

Thus, of the 26 lawmakers receiving more than $2,000 in aid, 25 were Democrats. The one Republican blessed by Big Labor was Rep. Peter Peyser (N.Y.), who plans to challenge Sen. Jim Buckley in next year's GOP senatorial primary Peyser received a staggering $21,555 from organized labor.

It is not surprising that a solid majority of the House Education and Labor Committee favors legislation supporting some sort of compulsory unionism for federal workers. All this flies in the face, however, of the wishes of the American public. Surveys conducted by the Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, J N.J., disclose that:

–83 per cent feel a federal, state or local government employe should be able to "work for the government whether or not he belongs to a union."

--By a margin of more than 7 to 1, Americans feel Congress should not "pass a law which would allow agreements requiring employes to join or pay dues to a union in order to work for the federal government."

--And by a margin of nearly 8 to 1, Americans oppose any "law which would allow agreements requiring employes to join or pay dues to a union in order to work for state, county and municipal governments."

NOBEL ECONOMIST WARNS U.S.

On a recent visit to Capitol Hill, the world-reknowned economist Friedrich A. Von Hayek warned that "The threat to the free enterprise society has never been more imminent in the United States than now." What's more, said von Hayek, who last year was rewarded for his lifetime of dedication to economic theory and to individual freedom under law with the Nobel Memorial Prize in economics, this danger is coming from a different direction than he had ever expected.

Addressing an organization which already numbers among its members over 130 members of Congress and Washington journalists, the Austrian economist said he had long thought that socialism was a danger. "But I didn't expect you'd be led into socialism by reason of an unsound monetary policy. I thought the United States had a fundamental belief in the importance of a sound currency."

As von Hayek sees it, the seeds of our present peril trace back to the acceptance of the so-called Keynesian "full-employment" doctrine in the 1930s and enshrined in the nation's statute books by the Full Employment Act of 1946. According to Keynes' theory, he explained, unemployment is caused by insufficient aggregate demand. In order to increase this aggregate demand, Keynes suggested that government should use fiscal deficits and expansionary monetary Policies to stimulate the economy. And Western governments, including ours, have been doing so almost uninterruptedly ever since. Witness estimates that this year's U.S. budget deficit alone may exceed $100 billion.

Hayek fears that the cumulative effect of these policies could before much more time has elapsed lead to an inflationary situation so bad that "government, to control the flood they've caused, will be forçed to impose permanent wage and price controls." And since, under such controls, prices could no longer be counted upon to allocate resources, the government would have to step in to perform this function. The result: a fully planned, centrally directed Socialist system.

If there is any hope for the future, von Hayek argues that we must reinstate rules that the government has to follow. He noted that in the past there were institutions, such as the international gold standard and the Bretton Woods monetary agreement, that helped government to resist the dictates of misled public opinion. Under the restraints imposed by these instituions, he said, it was that there are some things that the government just couldn't do.

The sad thing about our present economic plight, said von Hayek, is that "it has been caused by government following the advice of the great majority of my fellow economists." For the future, however, he believes the biggest obstacle to realistic economic policies may come not from the economists but from the news media.

"Now many economists finally know they are wrong," von Hayek explained, "but it will be hard for them to change the direction of government policy because they have convinced the media of Keynesian doctrines." The media, he said, are "dealers in second-hand ideas." As distinguished from scholars, reporters have a tendency to take ideas and keep them for life. Hence, concluded von Hayek, although economic theorists are changing their minds of Keynes, we are stuck with a generation of newsmen who will propagate Keynesian ideas for the next 30 years.

Hayek–who, as a professor of the London School of Economics was a personal acquaintance of the late Lord Keynes and, from oral conversations, enjoys many insights into Keynes' thinking that cannot be derived from Keynes' writings alone--is considered eminently qualified to criticize Keynesian theory.

Furthermore, he told his audience that the chief thing he holds against the late British economist is that, for its propagandistic effect, Keynes entitled his work the general theory when, in fact, it was applicable only to a very rare set of circumstances that happened to exist in England of his day. But for Keynes' prescriptions to work generally, von Hayek pointed out, it would be necessary for government to continually cause inflation to outspace public expectations, which becomes increasingly difficult and ultimately impossible as the rate of inflation mounts.

More important to us, such stimulative policies must lead to intolerable rates of inflation, which can wreak havoc not only on the economy but on the entire fabric of society. It is von Hayek's feeling, the least assuaged by the Administration's planned deficits, that the United States and other Western countries are rapidly approaching this point.

If we don't call a man Mr., we reasoned, why should we bother calling a woman Miss or Mrs. or Ms.? Ms. may be needed at the New York Times or the Wall Street Journal, where men are still misters (unless they're felons), but it shouldn't be a problem at The Register and Tribune.

So a while back we quietly deleted Ms., etc., from our sports pages. For example, Kathy Keck, the Roosevelt High School gymnast, is just Keck in our sports pages, just as her father and her uncles were before her.

This has been going on for more than a year, and last week Leighton Housh, the sports editor, and several writers and copy editors said they have never heard any comment from readers on the change, one way or another.

With that in mind, we now have widened the rule to cover women on the school board and the zoning commission and other political or quasi-political bodies. Again, no one has said anything, pro or con.

Eventually, we'll probably broaden this to other women in the news, until finally we have eliminated Ms., Mrs. and Miss from the paper.

This probably will take a while, and it probably will be met with great resistancs when we get to the women who are written about in our Home and Family pages. After all, no change ever pleases everyone.

All this is most insignificant even in the framework of the women's movement. Removing sexism-intentional and unintentional-from stories is far more important, both to us and to the readers.

Still, it's an interesting footnote, and our readers seem to have a fascination with some of our internal doings here at the Register and Tribune. So that's the reason for this little essay today.

THAT'S SHOW BIZ

WASHINGTON — Last week I tuned in my television set and I saw a man holding up a large calendar. As he talked he kept ripping the pages off the calendar. At first I thought it was a commercial for acid indigestion, but when I looked closely I realized it was the President of the United States.

Apparently the President's TV advisers have told him he can no longer sit in his Oval Office and just talk to the American people. In order to make the most use out of the medium he has to resort to visual aids.

This means holding up his energy message so that all of us can see it, and illustrating with a calendar how Congress has dragged its feet in passing any comprehensive legialation. It was a great performance, but what worries me about it is that in order to do it well it requires tremendous rehearsal time which no President of the United States can spare.

For example, it took at least three hours for the President to rehearse his 14-minute energy speech.

"Okay, Mr. President, let's run through it once again. Remember now, when you talk about Congress let's have more of a frown on your face and try to look angry."

"I looked angry the last time. It's not my fault I can't show anger."

"I'm not criticizing you, sir. It's just that you have to get more emotion into it. Don't forget you have submitted the most comprehensive energy policy of any President of the United States, and Congress has just twiddled its thumbs. We've got to get that across to the American people. Now we want you to hold up this book as you say, 'Four months ago I sent the Congress the 167-page draft of detailed legislation' -- like this."

"I did it that way the last time."

"But you stopped talking as you did it. It should be one motion with your hands as if you're doing it naturally."

"It's not as easy as you think to pick up a book and talk at the same time."

"But you can do it, Mr. President. After that, you pick up this calendar and you refer to January. Then you tear off January and talk about February and the fact Congress did nothing in February."

"That's easy."

"Except the last time you did it you tore off January, February and March (ital) at the same time (unital)l. It threw the teleprompter people something awful."

"Okay. Now what comes after March?"

"April."

"I think I can remember that. I have one other question. When I say four months have gone by without any action from The Hill – how many fingers do I hold up?"

"Four, Mr. President."

"Why don't you set the calendar aside when you hold up your four fingers?"

"I guess I could if I remember it. Could you give me the signal to put down the calendar and hold up four fingers?"

"Yes, sir. You just watch me."

"Now when I announce I'm raising the tariff on oil a dollar a barrel, do I put up one finger?"

"You better not. It might look obscene."

"I sure wish I could just give a speech without all this business."-

"You have to remember, sir, you're not just the President of the United States. You're a television personality. We're selling a product called Gerry Ford. And the only way people are going to buy it is if you come across sincere and believable. That's why we need allthe props we can get. Now let's try it from the top. Wait a minute, Mr. President. You're holding the calendar upside down."

By JACK ANDERSON
Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Despite promises of reform, the TV networks still play up violence on children's shows.

Researchers studying the Saturday morning fare clocked an act of aggression "every 3 and one-half minute s of actual program time on the commercial networks."

The worst offender was NBC, which produced 46 per cent of the violence. ABC had 30 per cent, CBS 24 per cent.

The mayhem subsided only long enough for the networks to sell the usual toys and tooth rot. The commercials sought to stimulate a desire in the kiddies for candy, pastries and pop.

"Children completely lacked exposure to ... the most natural and wholesome foods," the researchers declare in a confidential study. "There were no advertisements for fruits, vegetables or dairy products."

For years, we have crusaded against TV violence, which many sociologists believe has helped spread lawlessness in America. Again and again, we have shown how youngsters imitate the TV feats of Evel Knievel or Bonnie and Clyde.

More than a year ago, we cited a Federal Communications Commission report which urged reform of children's TV. The new chairman, Richard Wiley, assured us that reform was "on the front burner."

But Wiley's promises, according to the confidential survey, haven't done much to curb TV violence.

The study was conducted by the Media Action Research Center, with church and foundation backing. The center found from a careful review of the TV offereing on two successive Saturday mornings that fistfights, robberies and other hostile acts were endemic on commercial television.

The shows with the most aggression, averaging a hostile act every minute on one Saturday, were "Bugs Bunny," "Pink Panther," "Speedy Buggy," and "Wheelie and the Chopper Bunch."

At the same time, the survey found "positive social behavior" on children's television. But the incidents of "sharing, helping and cooperation," although frequent enough, seldom offset the aggressive acts.

On the positive side, the report cites the TV show, "Devlin," as an "outstanding program." Throughout half the show, the researchers recorded "no aggression, 10.33 acts of altruism, and 9.67 acts of sympathy explaining feelings."

Concludes the study: "It is possible to produce appealing nonviolent shows for children, given the desire and conscientiousness to do so."

Footnote: the National Association of Broadcasters, which is holding a children's program conference in Washington this week, defended the networks. A spokesman said the networks, particularly ABC, have made " great strides in calming down the Saturday (programs)." He also contended that children are able to distinguish between cartoons and real life. Children understand that cartoons figures are fantasies, he said.

AZORES ALTERNATIVE: If Portugal blocks the United States from using the Azores as a staging base to supply Israel, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has revealed, the United States is ready with "alternative possibilities."

He didn't eleborate.

We can report, however, that the Air Force has spent the past six months training crews to refuel giant C-5 cargo planes in mid-air. The crews are now ready.

They have taken C-5s on dramatic test flights halfway aroundthe world -- fully loaded, non-stop, with mid-air refueling. Some of the flying behemoths were flown from the West Coast to Iran, others from the East Coast to the Philippines.

U.In case Israel should need emergency supplies, the C-5s would be sent right down the middle of the Mediterranean over international waters.

MARTIN'S SECLUSION: The embattled former U.S. ambassador to Saigon, Graham Martin, has quietly dropped out of sight. He never made it back to the United States but stopped in Rome, where he has gone into seclusion.

During the last days of the Saigon regime, we published a succession of stories charging that he had misjudged the crisis and had mishandled the evacuation. But he has not come home to face the charges.

Members of Congress, eager to question Martin, have submitted inquiries to the State Department. These have been relayed to the U.S. embassy in Rome, but he hasn't responded at least not by official cable.

The State Department has made no effort to communicate with him, our sources say, because "there is no subject anybody wants to talk to him about."

FRIENDSHIP FILE: The huge Chase Mahanttan Bank has been keeping a file since 1969 on the relationships between its executives and government officials in a position to help the bank.

The bank sent executives a confidential letter seeking personal information about their friendship with "officials in the legislative and executive branches of government."

A spokesman explained that the purpose was to "get more people in the bank involved in public policy matters."

"KINDNESS" COMPARED TO WHAT?

The ironically named "Human Kindness Day" held in Washington, D.C. earlier this month was a bitter but timely reminder of the potential for massive trouble if strict security measures aren't in force when millions of innocent tourists troop to Washington for Bicentennial events.

"Human Kindness Day" draw a crowd of 125,000 to a rock concert on the mall near the Washington Monument. When the merrymaking was over, there had been 500 reported robberies — most involving assault — and 86 persons injured. One of them, Steven Laine, the director of public affairs at the Department of Agriculture, was stabbed in an eye that doctors say he'll lose. Mr. Laine was simply passing through the crowd on his way to work when he was attacked.

Despite the terror and carnage, one of the organizers, Carol E. Kirkendall, told the Washington Post that "Human Kindness Day this year was an unbelievable success, beautiful and happy." Miss Kirkendall represents a group called Compared to What Inc., which co-sponsored the bizarre affair. One can only wonder in amazement how it showed "human kindness" and compared to what was it "beautiful and happy?"

Supporters of the Concert argue the most participants were law-abiding and it was roving bands of young blacks who committed the crime.

To accept that explanation is to overlook at least three crucial lessons from Human Kindness Day: first, the marauding thugs were abetted if not aided by hundreds of others in the crowd who refused to raise their voices in protest. Second, the ugly fact must be faced that the crimes were largely racist, with blacks attacking and robbing whites. Third, the event was co-sponsored by the National Park Service, whose planning and execution of crowd control obviously were wholly inadequate.

We are still waiting to hear a word of explanation from the White House. People have a right to know what officials in the capital are doing to ensure that thousands of other Americans aren't treated the same way when they journey to Washington this summer and next.

If you share our concern, letters to your congressman and senators might help produce some answers.

U.S. IN THE LONG VIEW

Seventeen years after America's first space satellite went into orbit (has it really been that long?), Americans can buy a photographic map showing what their entire country looks like, on the even of its 200th anniversary, from about 570 miles out in space.

The black and white mosaic of images taken by NASA's LANDSAT-1 earth resources survey satellite has been printed in 29x41-inch size by the U.S. Geological Survey using parts of 595 pictures taken by LANDSAT-1 between July and October, 1972.

Two versions of the U.S. mosaic are available. One is from images made in a visible band of the spectrum Band 5) that accentuates urban areas and other works of man. The other is from images made in infrared light (Band 7) that accentuates water and topographical features. Both versions have state boundaries outlined with broken white lines.

Copies may be ordered prepaid for $1.25 each from the Branch of Distribution, U.S. Geological Survey, 1200 South Eads Street, Arlington, VA 22202. Orders should specify either Band 5 or Band 7.

1 Public statements indicate support of compulsory unionism in public sector.
2. Voted in 1970 against the Right to Work provision in the Postal Reorganization Act.
3 Has sponsored legislation which would compel federal, U. S. postal service, or state, county and local government employes to support unions in order to work for their own government.
4 Received ten per cent or more of total campaign contributions from union sources.
5 Total campaign contributions nowavailable on March 1, 1975

It is not surprising that a solid majority of the House Education and Labor Committee favors legislation supporting some sort of compulsory unionism for federal workers. All this flies in the face, however, of the wishes of the American public. Surveys conducted by the Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, J N.J., disclose that:

–83 per cent feel a federal, state or local government employe should be able to "work for the government whether or not he belongs to a union."

--By a margin of more than 7 to 1, Americans feel Congress should not "pass a law which would allow agreements requiring employes to join or pay dues to a union in order to work for the federal government."

--And by a margin of nearly 8 to 1, Americans oppose any "law which would allow agreements requiring employes to join or pay dues to a union in order to work for state, county and municipal governments."

NOBEL ECONOMIST WARNS U.S.

On a recent visit to Capitol Hill, the world-reknowned economist Friedrich A. Von Hayek warned that "The threat to the free enterprise society has never been more imminent in the United States than now." What's more, said von Hayek, who last year was rewarded for his lifetime of dedication to economic theory and to individual freedom under law with the Nobel Memorial Prize in economics, this danger is coming from a different direction than he had ever expected.

Addressing an organization which already numbers among its members over 130 members of Congress and Washington journalists, the Austrian economist said he had long thought that socialism was a danger. "But I didn't expect you'd be led into socialism by reason of an unsound monetary policy. I thought the United States had a fundamental belief in the importance of a sound currency."

As von Hayek sees it, the seeds of our present peril trace back to the acceptance of the so-called Keynesian "full-employment" doctrine in the 1930s and enshrined in the nation's statute books by the Full Employment Act of 1946. According to Keynes' theory, he explained, unemployment is caused by insufficient aggregate demand. In order to increase this aggregate demand, Keynes suggested that government should use fiscal deficits and expansionary monetary Policies to stimulate the economy. And Western governments, including ours, have been doing so almost uninterruptedly ever since. Witness estimates that this year's U.S. budget deficit alone may exceed $100 billion.

Hayek fears that the cumulative effect of these policies could before much more time has elapsed lead to an inflationary situation so bad that "government, to control the flood they've caused, will be forced to impose permanent wage and price controls." And since, under such controls, prices could no longer be counted upon to allocate resources, the government would have to step in to perform this function. The result: a fully planned, centrally directed Socialist system.

If there is any hope for the future, von Hayek argues that we must reinstate rules that the government has to follow. He noted that in the past there were institutions, such as the international gold standard and the Bretton Woods monetary agreement, that helped government to resist the dictates of misled public opinion. Under the restraints imposed by these instituions, he said, it was that there are some things that the government just couldn't do.

The sad thing about our present economic plight, said von Hayek, is that "it has been caused by government following the advice of the great majority of my fellow economists." For the future, however, he believes the biggest obstacle to realistic economic policies may come not from the economists but from the news media.

"Now many economists finally know they are wrong," von Hayek explained, "but it will be hard for them to change the direction of government policy because they have convinced the media of Keynesian doctrines." The media, he said, are "dealers in second-hand ideas." As distinguished from scholars, reporters have a tendency to take ideas and keep them for life. Hence, concluded von Hayek, although economic theorists are changing their minds of Keynes, we are stuck with a generation of newsmen who will propagate Keynesian ideas for the next 30 years.

Hayek--who, as a professor of the London School of Economics was a personal acquaintance of the late Lord Keynes and, from oral conversations, enjoys many insights into Keynes' thinking that cannot be derived from Keynes' writings alone--is considered eminently qualified to criticize Keynesian theory.

Furthermore, he told his audience that the chief thing he holds against the late British economist is that, for its propagandistic effect, Keynes entitled his work the general theory when, in fact, it was applicable only to a very rare set of circumstances that happened to exist in England of his day. But for Keynes' prescriptions to work generally, von Hayek pointed out, it would be necessary for government to continually cause inflation to outspace public expectations, which becomes increasingly difficult and ultimately impossible as the rate of inflation mounts.

More important to us, such stimulative policies must lead to intolerable rates of inflation, which can wreak havoc not only on the economy but on the entire fabric of society. It is von Hayek's feeling, the least assuaged by the Administration's planned deficits, that the United States and other Western countries are rapidly approaching this point.

If we don't call a man Mr., we reasoned, why should we bother calling a woman Miss or Mrs. or Ms.? Ms. may be needed at the New York Times or the Wall Street Journal, where men are still misters (unless they're felons), but it shouldn't be a problem at The Register and Tribune.

So a while back we quietly deleted Ms., etc., from our sports pages. For example, Kathy Keck, the Roosevelt High School gymnast, is just Keck in our sports pages, just as her father and her uncles were before her.

This has been going on for more than a year, and last week Leighton Housh, the sports editor, and several writers and copy editors said they have never heard any comment from readers on the change, one way or another.

With that in mind, we now have widened the rule to cover women on the school board and the zoning commission and other political or quasi-political bodies. Again, no one has said anything, pro or con.

Eventually, we'll probably broaden this to other women in the news, until finally we have eliminated Ms., Mrs. and Miss from the paper.

This probably will take a while, and it probably will be met with great resistancs when we get to the women who are written about in our Home and Family pages. After all, no change ever pleases everyone.

All this is most insignificant even in the framework of the women's movement. Removing sexism-intentional and unintentional-from stories is far more important, both to us and to the readers.

Still, it's an interesting footnote, and our readers seem to have a fascination with some of our internal doings here at the Register and Tribune. So that's the reason for this little essay today.

THAT'S SHOW BIZ

WASHINGTON — Last week I tuned in my television set and I saw a man holding up a large calendar. As he talked he kept ripping the pages off the calendar. At first I thought it was a commercial for acid indigestion, but when I looked closely I realized it was the President of the United States.

Apparently the President's TV advisers have told him he can no longer sit in his Oval Office and just talk to the American people. In order to make the most use out of the medium he has to resort to visual aids.

This means holding up his energy message so that all of us can see it, and illustrating with a calendar how Congress has dragged its feet in passing any comprehensive legialation. It was a great performance, but what worries me about it is that in order to do it well it requires tremendous rehearsal time which no President of the United States can spare.

For example, it took at least three hours for the President to rehearse his 14-minute energy speech.

"Okay, Mr.President,let's run through it once again. Remember now, when you talk about Congress let's have more of a frown on your face and try to look angry."

"I looked angry the last time. It's not my fault I can't show anger."

"I'm not criticizing you, sir. It's just that you have to get more emotion into it. Don't forget you have submitted the most comprehensive energy policy of any President of the United States, and Congress has just twiddled its thumbs. We've got to get that across to the American people. Now we want you to hold up this book as you say, 'Four months ago I sent the Congress the 167-page draft of detailed legislation' -- like this."

"I did it that way the last time."

"But you stopped talking as you did it. It should be one motion with your hands as if you're doing it naturally."

"It's not as easy as you think to pick up a book and talk at the same time."

"But you can do it, Mr. President. After that, you pick up this calendar and you refer to January. Then you tear off January and talk about February and the fact Congress did nothing in February."

"That's easy."

"Except the last time you did it you tore off January, February and March (ital) at the same time (unital)l. It threw the teleprompter people something awful."

"Okay. Now what comes after March?"

"April."

"I think I can remember that. I have one other question. When I say four months have gone by without any action from The Hill – how many fingers do I hold up?"

"Four, Mr. President."

"Why don't you set the calendar aside when you hold up your four fingers?"

"I guess I could if I remember it. Could you give me the signal to put down the calendar and hold up four fingers?"

"Yes, sir. You just watch me."

"Now when I announce I'm raising the tariff on oil a dollar a barrel, do I put up one finger?"

"You better not. It might look obscene."

"I sure wish I could just give a speech without all this business."-

"You have to remember, sir, you're not just the President of the United States. You're a television personality. We're selling a product called Gerry Ford. And the only way people are going to buy it is if you come across sincere and believable. That's why we need allthe props we can get. Now let's try it from the top. Wait a minute, Mr. President. You're holding the calendar upside down."

By JACK ANDERSON
Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Despite promises of reform, the TV networks still play up violence on children's shows.

Researchers studying the Saturday morning fare clocked an act of aggression "every 3 and one-half minute s of actual program time on the commercial networks."

The worst offender was NBC, which produced 46 per cent of the violence. ABC had 30 per cent, CBS 24 per cent.

The mayhem subsided only long enough for the networks to sell the usual toys and tooth rot. The commercials sought to stimulate a desire in the kiddies for candy, pastries and pop.

"Children completely lacked exposure to ... the most natural and wholesome foods," the researchers declare in a confidential study. "There were no advertisements for fruits, vegetables or dairy products."

For years, we have crusaded against TV violence, which many sociologists believe has helped spread lawlessness in America. Again and again, we have shown how youngsters imitate the TV feats of Evel Knievel or Bonnie and Clyde.

More than a year ago, we cited a Federal Communications Commission report which urged reform of children's TV. The new chairman, Richard Wiley, assured us that reform was "on the front burner."

But Wiley's promises, according to the confidential survey, haven't done much to curb TV violence.

The study was conducted by the Media Action Research Center, with church and foundation backing. The center found from a careful review of the TV offereing on two successive Saturday mornings that fistfights, robberies and other hostile acts were endemic on commercial television.

The shows with the most aggression, averaging a hostile act every minute on one Saturday, were "Bugs Bunny," "Pink Panther," "Speedy Buggy," and "Wheelie and the Chopper Bunch."

At the same time, the survey found "positive social behavior" on children's television. But the incidents of "sharing, helping and cooperation," although frequent enough, seldom offset the aggressive acts.

On the positive side, the report cites the TV show, "Devlin," as an "outstanding program." Throughout half the show, the researchers recorded "no aggression, 10.33 acts of altruism, and 9.67 acts of sympathy explaining feelings."

Concludes the study: "It is possible to produce appealing nonviolent shows for children, given the desire and conscientiousness to do so."

Footnote: the National Association of Broadcasters, which is holding a children's program conference in Washington this week, defended the networks. A spokesman said the networks, particularly ABC, have made " great strides in calming down the Saturday (programs)." He also contended that children are able to distinguish between cartoons and real life. Children understand that cartoons figures are fantasies, he said.

AZORES ALTERNATIVE: If Portugal blocks the United States from using the Azores as a staging base to supply Israel, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger has revealed, the United States is ready with "alternative possibilities."

He didn't eleborate.

We can report, however, that the Air Force has spent the past six months training crews to refuel giant C-5 cargo planes in mid-air. The crews are now ready.

They have taken C-5s on dramatic test flights halfway aroundthe world -- fully loaded, non-stop, with mid-air refueling. Some of the flying behemoths were flown from the West Coast to Iran, others from the East Coast to the Philippines.

U.In case Israel should need emergency supplies, the C-5s would be sent right down the middle of the Mediterranean over international waters.

MARTIN'S SECLUSION: The embattled former U.S. ambassador to Saigon, Graham Martin, has quietly dropped out of sight. He never made it back to the United States but stopped in Rome, where he has gone into seclusion.

During the last days of the Saigon regime, we published a succession of stories charging that he had misjudged the crisis and had mishandled the evacuation. But he has not come home to face the charges.

Members of Congress, eager to question Martin, have submitted inquiries to the State Department. These have been relayed to the U.S. embassy in Rome, but he hasn't responded at least not by official cable.

The State Department has made no effort to communicate with him, our sources say, because "there is no subject anybody wants to talk to him about."

FRIENDSHIP FILE: The huge Chase Mahanttan Bank has been keeping a file since 1969 on the relationships between its executives and government officials in a position to help the bank.

The bank sent executives a confidential letter seeking personal information about their friendship with "officials in the legislative and executive branches of government."

A spokesman explained that the purpose was to "get more people in the bank involved in public policy matters."

Appropriations bill is debated

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — A proposal to beef up the number of lawyers representing the public before the Missouri Public Service Commission was trimmed by state House-Senate appropriations conferees Monday night.

The joint conference committee also cut 10 per cent off rental funds for state office space here because the administration failed to seek bids for it, but retained $2 million for St. Louis storm sewers and $549,823 for a maternal health program.

Considering the bill to fund state executives and most agencies, the committee agreed to add only two full-time persons to the staff of the Public Counsel office of the Public Service Commission.

The Senate version of the bill didn't expand upon the current staff of two attorneys and a secretary, but the House called for the equivalent of nine and one-half employes to run the public counsel office.

Sen. Richard Webster, R-Carthage, said the public counsel did not need that many persons to represent the public.

"It is my opinion the public counsel is just attempting to hire a bunch of unemployed lawyers," he said, calling the expansion plan "empire building."

Sen. Paul Bradshaw, R-Springfield, said the public counsel's office is "an insult" to the commission because the public counsel is supposed to keep a watch on if the commission is damaging the public interest.

"I don't think we need to create a bureaucracy to make sure they (the PSC commissioners) don't cheat somebody," Bradshaw said.

Rep. James Russell, D-Florissant, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, noted the House was firmly behind the boost for the public counsel and almost passed a resolution forbidding him from bargaining on that issue.

But after about two hours of debate, the two sides agreed on a $100,067 budget for the office to fund two attorneys, two secretaries and a "problem-taker."

Though Russell wanted more for the public counsel, he proposed a successful change to take 10 per cent off the budget for the Board of Public Buildings after recent reports that no bids had been sought for rental space.

Claiming bids would have brought cheaper rents, Russell persuaded the committee to agree on a total $1.15 million budget for the rents.

The funds for the health care program, which were not included in the Senate bill, were reinstated to the tune of $549,283. The funds would implement a bill passed by the legislature earlier which has never gotten off the ground because of a legislative dispute with Gov. Christopher S. Bond. Bond has refused to submit the rules and regulations to the General Assembly for review as required by the legislation. Bond claims that represents an intrusion into executive powers.

3 troopers appointed to area

JEFFERSON CITY — Three of the 36 men commissioned as members of the Missouri State Highway Patrol Friday have been appointed to the 13-county Troop E area of Southeast Missouri.

The three are Roger B. Davis of Cardwell, Al Van Riehl of Cape Girardeau and Robert P. Stieffermann of Union.

Col. Sam S. Smith, superintendent of the highway patrol, presented the commissions to the new officers, who had been in training since Jan. 1.

If oncoming drivers continue to flash their brights at you when you have only your low-beam headlights on, then your lights need adjustment. They should aim down and slightly to the right.

JEFFERSON CITY — Three of the 36 men commissioned as members of the Missouri State Highway Patrol Friday have been appointed to the 13-county Troop E area of Southeast Missouri.

The three are Roger B. Davis of Cardwell, Al Van Riehl of Cape Girardeau and Robert P. Stieffermann of Union.

Col. Sam S. Smith, superintendent of the highway patrol, presented the commissions to the new officers, who had been in training since Jan. 1.

If oncoming drivers continue to flash their brights at you when you have only your low-beam headlights on, then your lights need adjustment. They should aim down and slightly to the right.

Unemployment benefits for teachers debated

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)

About 1,000 public school teachers in Missouri have already applied for federally-financed unemployment benefits under a controversial special jobless program initiated by Congress, the state Division of Employment Security said today.

"We've received in this office from our local offices in the neighborhood of 1,000 applications and a great many more have yet to come in," said Joseph Dietrich of the division. "The number (of applications) appears to be growing daily."

Only Monday, the Missouri House rejected a proposal that would prohibit 90 per cent of the state's 52,000 public school teachers from collecting benefits under the special plan even though they are paid for a 12-month period and are assured a job when the school year resumes in the fall.

Dietrich said no payments have been made to any of the teachers "under question" yet due to the 10-day protest period for determining their actual eligibility and the waiting week, which delays collection of initial benefits for seven days after the application.

But he said the initial payments to such teachers could probably begin next week unless prohibitory legislation is approved either at the state or federal level.

"We've heard a lot from the public" about what some lawmakers have called "a giant loophole" in the federal program, which would end Dec. 31, Dietrich said. "The majority of it has been negative."

Dietrich said that based on the applications received so far, the teachers would generally receive the maximum $85 a week if they are allowed to collect the benefits.

On a 70-77 vote, the House refused to accept the Senate-approved amendment that would have prohibited teachers from qualifying for the benefits.

Present interpretations of the federal program, that would provide benefits for up to 26 weeks, have said teachers need only be on a nine-month contract to collect even if they are paid year-round and have signed a new contract for next year.

The program would also apply to private and non-religious parochial school teachers, but the proposed amendment in the Missouri General Assembly would prohibit qualification for the benefits of only public school teachers.

"This is not a definition of unemployment as we understand it," Kansas City Republican Thomas Coleman argued. The program was aimed at assisting out-of -work persons who are not covered by normal unemployment plans in the various states.

But other lawmakers contended that a prohibition on benefits would discriminate against Missouri teachers because the state's share of the federal benefits would then go to other states. They said the teacher benefits were allowed by Congress and should be corrected at the national level.

Bonne Terre Democrat Ron Bockenkamp said he had been told by Missouri Congressman Bill Burlison, a Cape Girardeau Democrat, by telephone that Congress had just sent President Ford an appropriations bill that removed the teacher benefits.

"It's a question of whether this is a loophole, whether it is right or worng, not what other states do," Coleman said.

St. Louis Democrat J. B. Banks, who handled the bill, threatend to remove the measure from formal consideration if the amendment was adopted. Among other proposed changes was a provision that would put the prohibition into effect immediately upon signature by the governor."

Researchers say kicking the habit reverts risk factor

By MARY SCHURZ
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Smokers who kick the habit reduce the risk of getting or dying from lung cancer, heart disease or other diseases associated with smoking, medical researchers report.

"The smoker who stops begins to revert to the risk of the non-smoker," Dr. Leonard M. Schuman told a news conference at the 3rd World Conference on Smoking and Health.Schuman, director of epidemiology at the University of Minnesota's School of Public Health, said evidence was increasing that "cessation of smoking reduces the risk of mortality and morbidity" by four to 10 times in such diseases as lung cancer, heart disease, chronic bronchitis and pulmonary emphysema.

Schuman said statistics indicate that within five to six years after a smoker has quit the habit the risk of dying of lung cancer "approaches that of a non-smoker." The risk of mortality from cornonary artery disease approaches that of the non-smoker in 10 years after a smoker quits, he said.

The risk of mortality from chronic bronchitis or emphysema in the former smoker drops to the level of a non-smoker in four to five years, Dr. Schuman reported.

He said that autopsies performed on former smokers who died from causes other than lung cancer, coronary artery disease, chronic bronchitis or emphysema showed that a repair process had begun in the lungs after the smoker quit.

The chances of developing these diseases also are reduced among ex-smokers, he said.

"The risk of developing coronary disease also declines with an increasing length of time of the cessation of smoking," Dr. Schuman noted.

He said the length of time a person smoked, the amount he smoked and the age he began smoking were intimately related to the length of time after he quits when his risks of smoking-related diseases are reduced.

It will take longer for reversal to take place if the smoker smoked for a very long time — 25 to 30 years — if he started at a very young age or smoked heavily two or more packs a day, the doctor said.

Unemployment benefits for teachers debated

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)

About 1,000 public school teachers in Missouri have already applied for federally-financed unemployment benefits under a controversial special jobless program initiated by Congress, the state Division of Employment Security said today.

"We've received in this office from our local offices in the neighborhood of 1,000 applications and a great many more have yet to come in," said Joseph Dietrich of the division. "The number (of applications) appears to be growing daily."

Only Monday, the Missouri House rejected a proposal that would prohibit 90 per cent of the state's 52,000 public school teachers from collecting benefits under the special plan even though they are paid for a 12-month period and are assured a job when the school year resumes in the fall.

Dietrich said no payments have been made to any of the teachers "under question" yet due to the 10-day protest period for determining their actual eligibility and the waiting week, which delays collection of initial benefits for seven days after the application.

But he said the initial payments to such teachers could probably begin next week unless prohibitory legislation is approved either at the state or federal level.

"We've heard a lot from the public" about what some lawmakers have called "a giant loophole" in the federal program, which would end Dec. 31, Dietrich said. "The majority of it has been negative."

Dietrich said that based on the applications received so far, the teachers would generally receive the maximum $85 a week if they are allowed to collect the benefits.

On a 70-77 vote, the House refused to accept the Senate-approved amendment that would have prohibited teachers from qualifying for the benefits.

Present interpretations of the federal program, that would provide benefits for up to 26 weeks, have said teachers need only be on a nine-month contract to collect even if they are paid year-round and have signed a new contract for next year.

The program would also apply to private and non-religious parochial school teachers, but the proposed amendment in the Missouri General Assembly would prohibit qualification for the benefits of only public school teachers.

"This is not a definition of unemployment as we understand it," Kansas City Republican Thomas Coleman argued. The program was aimed at assisting out-of -work persons who are not covered by normal unemployment plans in the various states.

But other lawmakers contended that a prohibition on benefits would discriminate against Missouri teachers because the state's share of the federal benefits would then go to other states. They said the teacher benefits were allowed by Congress and should be corrected at the national level.

Bonne Terre Democrat Ron Bockenkamp said he had been told by Missouri Congressman Bill Burlison, a Cape Girardeau Democrat, by telephone that Congress had just sent President Ford an appropriations bill that removed the teacher benefits.

St. Louis Democrat J. B. Banks, who handled the bill, threatend to remove the measure from formal consideration if the amendment was adopted. Among other proposed changes was a provision that would put the prohibition into effect immediately upon signature by the governor."

By MARY SCHURZ
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Smokers who kick the habit reduce the risk of getting or dying from lung cancer, heart disease or other diseases associated with smoking, medical researchers report.

"The smoker who stops begins to revert to the risk of the non-smoker," Dr. Leonard M. Schuman told a news conference at the 3rd World Conference on Smoking and Health.Schuman, director of epidemiology at the University of Minnesota's School of Public Health, said evidence was increasing that "cessation of smoking reduces the risk of mortality and morbidity" by four to 10 times in such diseases as lung cancer, heart disease, chronic bronchitis and pulmonary emphysema.

Schuman said statistics indicate that within five to six years after a smoker has quit the habit the risk of dying of lung cancer "approaches that of a non-smoker." The risk of mortality from cornonary artery disease approaches that of the non-smoker in 10 years after a smoker quits, he said.

The risk of mortality from chronic bronchitis or emphysema in the former smoker drops to the level of a non-smoker in four to five years, Dr. Schuman reported.

He said that autopsies performed on former smokers who died from causes other than lung cancer, coronary artery disease, chronic bronchitis or emphysema showed that a repair process had begun in the lungs after the smoker quit.

The chances of developing these diseases also are reduced among ex-smokers, he said.

"The risk of developing coronary disease also declines with an increasing length of time of the cessation of smoking," Dr. Schuman noted.

He said the length of time a person smoked, the amount he smoked and the age he began smoking were intimately related to the length of time after he quits when his risks of smoking-related diseases are reduced.

It will take longer for reversal to take place if the smoker smoked for a very long time — 25 to 30 years — if he started at a very young age or smoked heavily two or more packs a day, the doctor said.

Household hints

This summer have an old-fashioned ice cream party. Everyone can help make the ice cream in a crank style or electric freezer. Then let each person create their own sundae. Popular toppings include canned cling peach slices, chocolate syrup, chopped nuts, fresh berries and whipping cream.

Make a delightful summer fruit salad by combining canned cling peach slices, strawberrise, chopped apple, orange sections and sliced bananas. Toss, chill and serve with your favorite fruit salad dressing.

When beating egg whites, tip the mixing bowl to determine if they have reached the proper consistency. The whites will not slide when they have reached the "stiff but not dry" stage called for in many recipes.

Facts on mildew

By JEWEL GRADY

Do you know what is in your closet other than clothes? Have you checked for mildew or damaging insects lately? Muggy summer weather is the time when mildew and insects secretely do great damage in dark, damp, poorly aired and poorly lighted storage area of the home.

Mildew is a thin, often whitish, growth produced on many kinds of surfaces found in the home, by molds--- simple plants belong to the group known as fungi. These molds cause considerable damage and often leave a musty odor. They discolor fabrics and sometimes eat into them. They discolor leather and paper.

Clothes moths and carpet beetles are two well known pests of fabrics. Carpet beetles are more abundant than clothes moths in most localities and damage that they do often is blamed on the clothes moth.

Agriculture research scientists at the U.S. Department of Agriculture gives precautionary ways to prevent mildew and effective preventative measures for protecting clothes and household furnishings against damage insects.

Ways to prevent mildew:

1. Keep things clean -- soil on articles can supply sufficient food for mildew to start growing when moisture and temperature are right.

2. Get rid of dampness -- try to control causes of dampness with air conditioners and dehumidifiers. or chemicals that absorb moisture. Adequate ventilation or circulation of the air can help to reduce the formation of mildew.

3. Get rid of musty odors -- --- chlorine bleach, sodium hypochlorite and quaternary ammonium compounds may be used to help resolve some musty problems.

4. Give some articles and surfaces special care - keep fabric dry and clean before storing and store with mildew inhibitor.

Research scientists suggest the following treatment for insect protection:

1. Use a protective spray of an oil-solution insecticide containing Methoxychlor, Strobane or Perthane. Do not soak or saturate them; spray surfaces until lightly moist. Then sprayed articles dry before you wear or store them.

2. Brushing and sunning helps to rid woolen clothing, blankets, and upholstered furnishings of insects and their eggs and larvae.

3. Store properly -- moth crystals, flakes, or balls are useful in protecting woolen articles. To be effective in holding the vapor, however, the container in which the articles are stored must be tightly sealed. In a trunk or closet use one pound of the above mentioned treatment for each 100 cubic feet of space. Cedar chests are good pestproof containers primarily because of their tight construction but after they are two years old, you should add moth crystals, flakes or balls among the woolen to be stores.

Home and Garden Bulletin No. 113— Protecting Woolens against Clothes Moths and Carpet Bettles and Home and Garden No. 68 — How to Prevent and Remove Mildew will give further instructions on home care of clothing and home furnishings. Copies may be obtained by contacting the University of Missouri Extension Center in your county.

Household hints

Other popular hanging plants are ferns, Swedish ivy, bridal ivy, spider plant and philodendrons, Mrs. Carroll said.

Turkeys breed through nose

Dear Ann Landers: Your column is a great tool for educating people. I have learned from it and now I want to educate others. Although I never graduated from high school I am an authority on one subject. Turkeys.

I have raised turkeys for 33 years and discovered something that most people do not know. From very close observation I have learned that turkeys breed through the nose. The Tom turkey has a small extension above his snoot which becomes visible when he struts.

Humans are unaware of this but the hen turkey knows. Turkeys strut when they want to mate. It's a lot like a tribal dance. If a hen turkey is interested in mating she will join the dance and rub her nostril against the Tom's snoot. What occurs is the actual mating process.

Some of your so-called experts will say this is not true. I say let them look in books. I look at turkeys. -- Topeka Reader

Dear Topeka: Since I'm unable to observe turkeys at close range (they aren't allowed in this apartment, Board of Health regulations) I must rely on books. According to everything I have read, turkeys mate just like all other birds.

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is intended to be a violent reprobation to Martin's Ferry, the man who said, "I happen to be a guy who wouldn't marry a girl who smokes -- and there are many more like me."

Dear Rock: Thanks for your point of view. Here's another one:

Dear Ann: I thought for sure my boyfriend wrote that letter and signed it "Martin's Ferry" although we live in another state. He swore on a Bible that he didn't -- and I believe him.

When we first started to date I smoked like a chimney and it almost put an end to our relationship. He made it plain that he thoroughly detested smoking and I had to make an important decision. Was he worth giving up cigarets for ? I decided he was and I quit.

That was six months ago and I'm thrilled I chose him over the cigarets. I feel so much better. My nasty cough is gone. It's as if I've been liberated from slavery. I want to shout from the housetops, "I love that man!" -- Petunia

Dear Pet: Go ahead and shout. I'll bet it's music to his ears!

Dear Ann: Thanks for saying, "Not everyone belongs in college." Too many parents think it's a social disgrace if their children would prefer to go to work or, heaven forbid, attend a vocational school instead of follow Dad to Dartmouth or Mom to Smith.

Household hints

This summer have an old-fashioned ice cream party. Everyone can help make the ice cream in a crank style or electric freezer. Then let each person create their own sundae. Popular toppings include canned cling peach slices, chocolate syrup, chopped nuts, fresh berries and whipping cream.

Make a delightful summer fruit salad by combining canned cling peach slices, strawberrise, chopped apple, orange sections and sliced bananas. Toss, chill and serve with your favorite fruit salad dressing.

When beating egg whites, tip the mixing bowl to determine if they have reached the proper consistency. The whites will not slide when they have reached the "stiff but not dry" stage called for in many recipes.

Facts on mildew

By JEWEL GRADY

Do you know what is in your closet other than clothes? Have you checked for mildew or damaging insects lately? Muggy summer weather is the time when mildew and insects secretely do great damage in dark, damp, poorly aired and poorly lighted storage area of the home.

Mildew is a thin, often whitish, growth produced on many kinds of surfaces found in the home, by molds--- simple plants belong to the group known as fungi. These molds cause considerable damage and often leave a musty odor. They discolor fabrics and sometimes eat into them. They discolor leather and paper.

Clothes moths and carpet beetles are two well known pests of fabrics. Carpet beetles are more abundant than clothes moths in most localities and damage that they do often is blamed on the clothes moth.

Agriculture research scientists at the U.S. Department of Agriculture gives precautionary ways to prevent mildew and effective preventative measures for protecting clothes and household furnishings against damage insects.

Ways to prevent mildew:

1. Keep things clean -- soil on articles can supply sufficient food for mildew to start growing when moisture and temperature are right.

2. Get rid of dampness -- try to control causes of dampness with air conditioners and dehumidifiers. or chemicals that absorb moisture. Adequate ventilation or circulation of the air can help to reduce the formation of mildew.

3. Get rid of musty odors -- --- chlorine bleach, sodium hypochlorite and quaternary ammonium compounds may be used to help resolve some musty problems.

4. Give some articles and surfaces special care - keep fabric dry and clean before storing and store with mildew inhibitor.

Research scientists suggest the following treatment for insect protection:

1. Use a protective spray of an oil-solution insecticide containing Methoxychlor, Strobane or Perthane. Do not soak or saturate them; spray surfaces until lightly moist. Then sprayed articles dry before you wear or store them.

2. Brushing and sunning helps to rid woolen clothing, blankets, and upholstered furnishings of insects and their eggs and larvae.

3. Store properly -- moth crystals, flakes, or balls are useful in protecting woolen articles. To be effective in holding the vapor, however, the container in which the articles are stored must be tightly sealed. In a trunk or closet use one pound of the above mentioned treatment for each 100 cubic feet of space. Cedar chests are good pestproof containers primarily because of their tight construction but after they are two years old, you should add moth crystals, flakes or balls among the woolen to be stores.

Home and Garden Bulletin No. 113— Protecting Woolens against Clothes Moths and Carpet Bettles and Home and Garden No. 68 — How to Prevent and Remove Mildew will give further instructions on home care of clothing and home furnishings. Copies may be obtained by contacting the University of Missouri Extension Center in your county.

McGlothen nears midseason form

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Right-hander Lynn McGlothen is nearing midseason form and hopes the rest of the St. Louis Cardinals are also.

"I think we have three or four guys who can carry this club," the 6-foot-2 McGlothen said after stopping the Atlanta Braves 1-0 on four hits Monday night.

"It's just a matter of putting things together," maintained McGlothen, whose triumph boosted his record to 5-4.

"We can turn around," he said. "I feekl we're still in the thick of things. In a week's time we could put together a streak and be in first place."

The streak to which McGlothen referred is long overdue for the Cards, who stand 20-25 in the National League East following six victories in 10 games.

But the struggling club, which was picked to finish at or near the top of its division, is still only 5½ games off the pace being set by the front-running Chicago Cubs.

"If we could do that we'd be in good shape," acknowledged Manager Red Schoendienst in reference to McGlothen's suggestion.

"It wouldn't make any difference what the other clubs were doing as long as we won," Schoendienst added. "That's the big thing. We've got to win."

McGlothen, in fashioning his second shutout, delivered only 98 pitches and scattered singles by Ralph Garr, Darrell Evans, Clarence Gaston and Marty Perez to outduel Braves right-hander Carl Morton, 5-6.

St. Louis' run, meanwhile, came on singles by Lou Brock and Ted Simmons to accompany a walk by Reggie Smith, and McGlothen retired 15 in a row between the second and seventh innings.

"Tonight I felt I had to make some real good pitches," commented the Cards pitcher, who had previously blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0 on April 29.

"I had a good fast ball in Pittsburgh and I felt I could throw in anywhere," he remarked. "Tonight I had to kep the ball down."

Atlanta's lone chance to break through against McGlothen was blunted in the seventh when Earl Williams was thrown out from deep in the hole by Cards shortstop Mario Guerrero.

Dusty Baker followed the defensive gem with a walk and Cards first baseman Ron Fairly, who was holding Baker, was able to scoop up Evans' hot smash near the bag.

"It was the game," Cards Coach George Kissell said of Guerrero's sparkling play, "because the next guy walked and the first baseman would have had to play back.

"The ball Evans hit would've been a triile and we'd have lost if that had happened," Kissell said.

McSpadden wins 1st

Southeast Missouri athletes competing in the minor leagues continued to turn out top performances for their respective clubs.

Puxico's Galen McSpadden, former Southeast Missouri State University standout who is in his second season with the Reno, Nev., Twins-Padres in the California class A league, registered his first victory of the season and lowered his earned run mark to a sparkling 1.13 after working five innings, allowing two hits and three walks while fanning three. The hard throwing lefthander has appeared in five bames.

Mark Littell of Gideon, playing with the Omaha Royals in the American Association class AAA league, continued to lower his ERA mark with six innings of four hit ball last week. The fireballing righthander has worked five games, going 35 innings, allowing 26 hits and 17 walks while fanning 31. He has a 2.80 ERA.

Arbyrd's Randy Smith remained undefeated on the season for the El Paso Angels in the Texas class AA league by working seven frames and allowing five hits and two walks while fanning two. His ERA is 4.18.

Blaylock is hitting .287 for the Visalia, Cailf. Mets with 27 hits in 94 times at bat, including five doubles, six homes and 26 runs batted in.

Steve Coulson of Fisk continued to raise his batting averaged with an eight for 25 showing at the plate for the West Haven Yanks in the Eastern class AA league. On the season, Coulson has collected 18 hits, two doubles and one homer while driving in eight runs.

Cardinals complete trade

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals have acquired the contract of minor league outfielder Wayne Nordhagen to complete a deal made last week with the Atlanta Braves.

Nordhagen, 27, the Cardinals said, has been with the Braves' Richmond Triple-A farm club in the International League and will be sent to Tulsa of the American Association.

McGlothen nears midseason form

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Right-hander Lynn McGlothen is nearing midseason form and hopes the rest of the St. Louis Cardinals are also.

"I think we have three or four guys who can carry this club," the 6-foot-2 McGlothen said after stopping the Atlanta Braves 1-0 on four hits Monday night.

"It's just a matter of putting things together," maintained McGlothen, whose triumph boosted his record to 5-4.

"We can turn around," he said. "I feekl we're still in the thick of things. In a week's time we could put together a streak and be in first place."

The streak to which McGlothen referred is long overdue for the Cards, who stand 20-25 in the National League East following six victories in 10 games.

But the struggling club, which was picked to finish at or near the top of its division, is still only 5½ games off the pace being set by the front-running Chicago Cubs.

"If we could do that we'd be in good shape," acknowledged Manager Red Schoendienst in reference to McGlothen's suggestion.

"It wouldn't make any difference what the other clubs were doing as long as we won," Schoendienst added. "That's the big thing. We've got to win."

McGlothen, in fashioning his second shutout, delivered only 98 pitches and scattered singles by Ralph Garr, Darrell Evans, Clarence Gaston and Marty Perez to outduel Braves right-hander Carl Morton, 5-6.

St. Louis' run, meanwhile, came on singles by Lou Brock and Ted Simmons to accompany a walk by Reggie Smith, and McGlothen retired 15 in a row between the second and seventh innings.

"Tonight I felt I had to make some real good pitches," commented the Cards pitcher, who had previously blanked the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0 on April 29.

"I had a good fast ball in Pittsburgh and I felt I could throw in anywhere," he remarked. "Tonight I had to kep the ball down."

Atlanta's lone chance to break through against McGlothen was blunted in the seventh when Earl Williams was thrown out from deep in the hole by Cards shortstop Mario Guerrero.

Dusty Baker followed the defensive gem with a walk and Cards first baseman Ron Fairly, who was holding Baker, was able to scoop up Evans' hot smash near the bag.

"It was the game," Cards Coach George Kissell said of Guerrero's sparkling play, "because the next guy walked and the first baseman would have had to play back.

"The ball Evans hit would've been a triile and we'd have lost if that had happened," Kissell said.

McSpadden wins 1st

Southeast Missouri athletes competing in the minor leagues continued to turn out top performances for their respective clubs.

Puxico's Galen McSpadden, former Southeast Missouri State University standout who is in his second season with the Reno, Nev., Twins-Padres in the California class A league, registered his first victory of the season and lowered his earned run mark to a sparkling 1.13 after working five innings, allowing two hits and three walks while fanning three. The hard throwing lefthander has appeared in five bames.

Mark Littell of Gideon, playing with the Omaha Royals in the American Association class AAA league, continued to lower his ERA mark with six innings of four hit ball last week. The fireballing righthander has worked five games, going 35 innings, allowing 26 hits and 17 walks while fanning 31. He has a 2.80 ERA.

Arbyrd's Randy Smith remained undefeated on the season for the El Paso Angels in the Texas class AA league by working seven frames and allowing five hits and two walks while fanning two. His ERA is 4.18.

Blaylock is hitting .287 for the Visalia, Cailf. Mets with 27 hits in 94 times at bat, including five doubles, six homes and 26 runs batted in.

Steve Coulson of Fisk continued to raise his batting averaged with an eight for 25 showing at the plate for the West Haven Yanks in the Eastern class AA league. On the season, Coulson has collected 18 hits, two doubles and one homer while driving in eight runs.

Cardinals complete trade

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals have acquired the contract of minor league outfielder Wayne Nordhagen to complete a deal made last week with the Atlanta Braves.

Nordhagen, 27, the Cardinals said, has been with the Braves' Richmond Triple-A farm club in the International League and will be sent to Tulsa of the American Association.

Robert pitcher Oran past Benton

Oran knocked a win out of Benton 7-1 in Semo Softball League action Sunday. Robert, the winning pitcher, did an amazing job by fanninga total of thirteen batters while allowing only one hit and one run. Gilliland, the losing pitcher, fanned two batters for his team.

Oran did most of their scoring in the first inning of play by scoring three runs and scattering the rest of their scoring throughout the entire game. They also made two runs in the third, one in the fifth, and one in the seventh. For Benton, they made their only run in the fourth inning. They lead 5-0 in the third before Benton got on the scoreboard in the fourth inning with one run. Oran then went on to score two more with these coming in the fifth and seventh innings. Benton, however, remained scoreless for the rest of the game.

Theleading scorers for Oran proved to be Metc with a four for four showing at the plate, three runs which included three singles and a homerun, plus three runs batted in. Hahn scored two runs followed by J. and B. Emerson with one run each. For Benton, Bertrand scored the only run for his team.

In the hitting department, Oran again proved to be the better one by fashioning nine hits while Benton claimed one hit. The leading hit smashers for Oran included Metc with four, Hahn with two, J. Emerson, B. Emerson, D. Halter, and T. Halter all with one hit each. Bertrand got the only hit for Benton.

Oran will see action again Wednesday night at Oran when they take on play against the Cape Mets. They will also be in action play Saturday night when they will be participating in the Southeast Invitational at New Hamburg.

What's the law?

The case of the sexy voice owner

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

By-Line Looey was a gossip columnist. Unable to come up with a story about a man biting a dog or a bull throwing a congressman, he decided to make some telephone calls in the hopes of finding some material to write about.

What he came up with, however, was a voice that he considered the sexiest he had ever heard. and, it belonged to Mary, a secretary, who had answered one of his many calls.

Deciding to share his discovery with his readers, Looey added a footnote to his column, the next day, that read in effect: "If you want to hear a sexy telephone voice, dial AH 1-1234."

The result? Within minutes after the newspaper hit the street, Mary began to receive telephone calls from more wolves than could be found in the Canadian Rockies. Furious, she sued Looey for damages.

"He had no right to print that story about me," she complained in court. "As a secretary, I found myself confounded by propositions instead of prepositions."

"It was a good story," responded Looey, "and, as a newspaper reporter, I had every right to print it. After all, not everyone has a sexy voice and everyone is interested in one."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you make Looey pay damages to the sexy-sounding secretary?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that stories may be printed in newspapers that are public or private in nature, provided the public has a legitimate interest in the subject matter of the story. But, in this case, concluded the judge, the sexiness of Mary's voice was not a legitimate news item and could be deemed objectionable.

Dr. Lamb

'Softage' needed for healthy colon

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My doctor says that I have diverticulosis. X rays have been taken. I understand no bulky or seed foods should be eaten. However, lately I have read the opposite is most beneficial, foods like coarse bran, whole tomatoes instead of juice, etc. I would appreciate hearing from you on this matter.

I have had constipation problems since I was a small child, also a great deal of gas.

DEAR READER — There is going to be a lot of confusion about diet and diverticulosis for some time. The diverticula are small pockets of the colon. They are really small hernias of the inner lining of the colon through the muscular wall of the colon.

These small pockets are more apt to form in people like yourself who have had long term constipation or poor bowel habits. In general, any situation that is associated with spasm, cramping, constipation or causes a build up of pressure within the colon is thought to contribute to the small hernias or diverticula.

The older thinking was to give people with colon problems, or almost any disorder of the digestive system, a bland diet. The trouble with this is that the colon will remove all the water from such bland foods and what is left is a small, hard food residue that leads to constipation and poor bowel function. To promote proper function and avoid spasm of the colon you do need bulk in the diet.

Those foods that look like roughage when you eat them are often not roughage at all. The most important one on the basis of recent studies is cereal fiber, found in almost all whole cereals except rice and certainly in abundance in all those breakfast foods labeled as bran or whole wheat products. Real whole wheat bread is another good source of cereal fiber.

The cereal fiber softens and retains moisture. By retaining moisture in the food residue adequate bulk is maintained and the soft residue is not likely to irritate the colon as does the hard, dry residue of most bland diets.

Not all people do well on a diet that suddenly increases the bulk in the diet. It usually takes three or four weeks to get over the initial increase in gas formation. Along with the change in diet program you would need a good bowel training program. I can't cover all these points here, but you can get the details on the diet and bowel training by writing to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019 and asking for The Health Letter on Diverticulosis. Send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope for costs and mailing.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Wednesday, May 28, 1975
Sikeston, Mo.

Dear Mr. Blanton:

I have just read, "Mailbox" and the letter you printed Tuesday, May 27, 1975 that was written by Mr. Lee Beaird, Sikeston Mo. And as I read all the Naughty, "little" things that Big bad, chauvinist Lee had to say I wondered if he got nearly that excited when they took prayer out of school or protested, "the reading of God's Word from the moon. And I can't help but wonder and be concerned if he, "Lee Beaird"- was burned to a well done, as he said he was when he read of the action taken against the distributors of the book, "The Happy Hooker", or if that will come at a future date, when he stands before God. Mr. Beaird spoke of, old fat Baptist ladies, and self righteous morons-

Maybe he, Mr. Beaird needs to look in the mirrow, A Baptist? He's not self righteous? He is— Now a Baptist I am, and I'm thankful-but first I'm saved by the Lord Jesus Christ, therefore not because of anything I have done-but because of him I'm righteous.

Now I know Mr. Beaird just can't stand people that wear 4" platform shoes running the city, state, and county. But God is no respector of men. And I'm convinced that it would be better for those people to be running the country than a bunch of Lee Beairds with a copy of the happy hooker stuck in front of their noses.

Thank You
Russell Gaddis

Dr. Lamb

'Softage' needed for healthy colon

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My doctor says that I have diverticulosis. X rays have been taken. I understand no bulky or seed foods should be eaten. However, lately I have read the opposite is most beneficial, foods like coarse bran, whole tomatoes instead of juice, etc. I would appreciate hearing from you on this matter.

I have had constipation problems since I was a small child, also a great deal of gas.

DEAR READER — There is going to be a lot of confusion about diet and diverticulosis for some time. The diverticula are small pockets of the colon. They are really small hernias of the inner lining of the colon through the muscular wall of the colon.

These small pockets are more apt to form in people like yourself who have had long term constipation or poor bowel habits. In general, any situation that is associated with spasm, cramping, constipation or causes a build up of pressure within the colon is thought to contribute to the small hernias or diverticula.

The older thinking was to give people with colon problems, or almost any disorder of the digestive system, a bland diet. The trouble with this is that the colon will remove all the water from such bland foods and what is left is a small, hard food residue that leads to constipation and poor bowel function. To promote proper function and avoid spasm of the colon you do need bulk in the diet.

Those foods that look like roughage when you eat them are often not roughage at all. The most important one on the basis of recent studies is cereal fiber, found in almost all whole cereals except rice and certainly in abundance in all those breakfast foods labeled as bran or whole wheat products. Real whole wheat bread is another good source of cereal fiber.

The cereal fiber softens and retains moisture. By retaining moisture in the food residue adequate bulk is maintained and the soft residue is not likely to irritate the colon as does the hard, dry residue of most bland diets.

Not all people do well on a diet that suddenly increases the bulk in the diet. It usually takes three or four weeks to get over the initial increase in gas formation. Along with the change in diet program you would need a good bowel training program. I can't cover all these points here, but you can get the details on the diet and bowel training by writing to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019 and asking for The Health Letter on Diverticulosis. Send 50 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope for costs and mailing.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Wednesday, May 28, 1975
Sikeston, Mo.

Dear Mr. Blanton:

I have just read, "Mailbox" and the letter you printed Tuesday, May 27, 1975 that was written by Mr. Lee Beaird, Sikeston Mo. And as I read all the Naughty, "little" things that Big bad, chauvinist Lee had to say I wondered if he got nearly that excited when they took prayer out of school or protested, "the reading of God's Word from the moon. And I can't help but wonder and be concerned if he, "Lee Beaird"- was burned to a well done, as he said he was when he read of the action taken against the distributors of the book, "The Happy Hooker", or if that will come at a future date, when he stands before God. Mr. Beaird spoke of, old fat Baptist ladies, and self righteous morons-

Maybe he, Mr. Beaird needs to look in the mirrow, A Baptist? He's not self righteous? He is—Now a Baptist I am, and I'm thankful-but first I'm saved by the Lord Jesus Christ, therefore not because of anything I have done-but because of him I'm righteous.

Now I know Mr. Beaird just can't stand people that wear 4" platform shoes running the city, state, and county. But God is no respector of men. And I'm convinced that it would be better for those people to be running the country than a bunch of Lee Beairds with a copy of the happy hooker stuck in front of their noses.

Thank You
Russell Gaddis

Ozzie Nelson dies of cancer

LOS NGELE (Pt —Ozzie Nelson, the bandleader-turned-actor whose "Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" entertained millions for 22 years on radio and television, died of cancer, early today. He was 69.

His wife for almost 40 years, Harriet Hilliard Nelson, was at his bedside when he died.

Nelson had undergone liver surgery eight months ago and remarked, "Isn't that odd for a guy who never drank or smoked."

Nelson, who formerly swam two miles daily in the Pacific Ocean, had been failing after the operation and was confined to his Hollywood home. He was visited almost daily by his two sons, David and Rick, who starred with their parents on radio and television.

A funeral service is scheduled Thursday at Forest Lawn Hollywood Hils, a family spokesman said.

Assistance for elderly to begin with July checks

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Every family knows that inflation affects the lives and pocketbooks of all Americans. But perhaps no segment of our population has suffered from its pressure as have our older citizens.

With inflation rate up again in May, designated as "Older Americans Month," we have been reminded that inflation continues as a major obstacle to this country's commitment to a decent standard of living, rightfully earned, for all Americans.

Retirement should be a time of joy and fulfillment rather than privation and frustration, but the fact remains that some 200,000 older Missourians, one-fourth our population 60 and over, lives at or below the poverty level.

The 12.2 per cent inflationary rate in the last 12 months has continued to erode the purchasing power of our dollars. Some of the steepest price increases have been in food, housing, medical care and transportation, the four items which take 80 cents of every dollar in the average senior citizens budget.

However, badly needed assistance for our elderly is in sight.

Current law calls for an automatic cost-of-living increase on Social Security benefits effective in June to be reflected in July checks. Earlier this year the President proposed a 5 per cent ceiling on increases tied to the Consumer Price Index.

The Senate voted against the Social Security limitation; therefore, beneficiaries are now scheduled to receive an 8 per cent raise.

In addition, the tax cut bill provided a $50 payment to each Social Security, railroad retirement and supplemental security income recipient.

Another source of meaningful relief for the elderly is the extension of the Older Americans Act, passed by the House of Representatives April 9 and now before the Senate subcommittee on aging.

Since 1965, when this law was first enacted, some 400 local agencies providing services for the elderly have been funded. These agencies reach approximately 70 per cent of the older population in the country.

The present Older Americans Act provides community service employment, transportation systems and nutrition projects. In addition to extending these programs, the legislation passed by the House would add news ways to assist the elderly in remaining self-sufficient. These include counseling services, home health care and housing assistance.

Nontraditional ag study program goes statewide

PORTAGEVILLE — A pilot program in nontraditional study in agriculture is now being expanded statewide, according to Kathryn Kinnard of Portageville, University of Missouri continuing education specialist for the Bootheel extension area.

The first of its kind in the nation, the program makes it possible for qualified, interested Missourians to pursue the B.S. degree in agriculture while working fulltime in farming or agribusiness.

Funded in part by the Kellogg Foundation, the Nontraditional Study Program (NSP) has been in operation during the past year in a 13-county pilot area of north central and northwestern Missouri.

Those who have no previous college work may enter the program; but it is mainly intended for those who have interrupted their college careers in the past and who find it difficult or impossible to return to campus as a student.

Enrollees should have a need and desire for the B.S. degree in agriculture, be engaged in farming or agricusiness or planning such a career, and have not been a fulltime student in any educational institution in the past five years.

Credit toward the degree may be earned in a number of ways: transfer of credit from other schools, College Level Examination Program (CLEP), departmental examinations, correspondence study, extension courses, and special problems, readings and projects directed by UMC faculty.

Enrollees may also earn credit by completing appropriate course work at community colleges, four-year colleges or universities (including UMC). Credit may also be awarded by faculty members for documented, relevant learning in life experiences.

College of Agriculture faculty will provide counseling and advisement to NSP students and regular fees will be charged. A registration and supplemental fee is also charged. The number of students accepted into the program will be limited.

With the University of Missouri Delta Center strategicallfy located in the middle of the Bootheel, consulations with agricultural professionals are available in addition to an agriculturally oriented library. Campus based specialists visit Portageville regularly to explore the development of research projects in operation. Extension courses continually in progress adds to the campus atmosphere of the center. It is a natural location for a nucleus of nontraditional study participants. Graduate or under-graduate offerings can be established with the verstaile programs possible campus- center oriented.

Those interested should write or call Kathryn Kinnard, University of Missouri- Delta Center, P.O. Box 160, Portageville, Missouri 63873, phone number: 369-5431.

Ozzie Nelson dies of cancer

LOS NGELE (Pt —Ozzie Nelson, the bandleader-turned-actor whose "Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" entertained millions for 22 years on radio and television, died of cancer, early today. He was 69.

His wife for almost 40 years, Harriet Hilliard Nelson, was at his bedside when he died.

Nelson had undergone liver surgery eight months ago and remarked, "Isn't that odd for a guy who never drank or smoked."

Nelson, who formerly swam two miles daily in the Pacific Ocean, had been failing after the operation and was confined to his Hollywood home. He was visited almost daily by his two sons, David and Rick, who starred with their parents on radio and television.

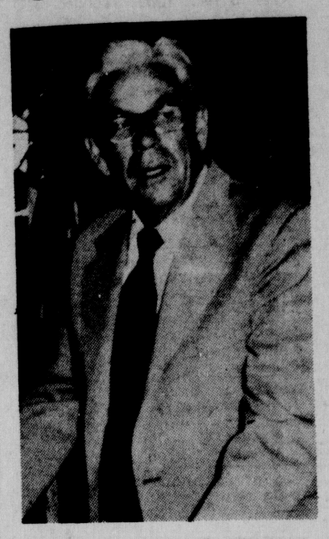
Retiring president says SeMo holding its own



Dr. Mark Scully

While many other colleges and universities across the nation were experiencing a decline in the size of the freshman class in the past few years, Southeast Missouri State University at Cape Girardeau has been holding its own, according to Dr. Mark Scully of Cape Girardeau, retiring president of the university.

Scully, 66, reminisced with Rotarians Monday night at the Dutch Pantry about his career as a teacher and administrator. Scully started teaching at Birds Point and has taught in schools in Paducah, Ky., Deerborn, Mich., and Missouri before becoming president at Southeast Missouri State University.

Scully told Rotarians that SeMo state is designed for 7,000 students, although it currently enrolls about 7,600. He added that the university operates most efficiently at that level of enrollment.

The program of which Scully is most proud of getting started at the school during his presidency is the two-year nurse training program.

Demonstrators say work not hampered during protest

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State Division of Family Service Officials say operations throughtout the state were maintained at a normal level during the initial day of a two-day demonstration by welfare workers seeking increased pay.

The demonstrators, primarily welfare caseworkers and clerical help, were to move their protest for higher salaries to the Capitol today as well as meet with legislators attempting to work out a compromise on appropriations for the division.

About 1,000 division employes took the day off Monday and conducted informational picketing at welfare offices in both metropolitan areas as well as ssme rural areas of the state to dramatize their demands for a 22 per cent hike in salaries for the year beginning in July.

Legislative budgets have called for about a 6 per cent boost in pay in view of the tight financial situation facing the state in the coming year.

Frank Seymour, chairman of the division's Employe Association of St. Louis and St. Louis County, estimated that nearly three-quarters ofthe workers in the city office stayed away from work. Other counties around the state reported equally high absenteeism.

But Tom McLaughlin, Deputy director of the divison in Jefferson City, disputed those claims, saying approximately 600 of the 1,600 workers in St. Louis took the day off.

"The demonstrations had no great impact on our operations," McLaughlin said. "We made plans in all our offices, and the staff cooperated quite well, to cover all our normal operations. Then, people we could allow, we let off on vacation."

While he said the division was not sanctioning the demonstration, "we didn't feel we were in a position that we could deny these people the right to voice their concern about salaries and working conditions."

Those concerns have been expressed for some time, both by the division itself and by two legislative committees that have looked into its operation in the past year.

"They hope," he said of the employes, "and so do we that the Missouri Legislature will appropriate funds needed to upgrade the salaries."

Only the directors at Princeton and Grundy County offices were available for answering telephones and handling inquiries Monday, and directors at offices in other counties reported that more than half of their workers failed to report.

"Surprisingly enough, we haven't had too many people come in," commented Sandra Brooks, director of the Clay County office. "Apparently, they've gotten wind of what's going on."

Pay increase approved

PORTAGEVILLE—The City Council Monday night approved a $50-per-month pay increase for police personnel and for laborers in the street and water departments, according to City Clerk George Vogel.

The council agreed to assist the Bootheel Weather Watch Club in securing a siren-type warning system to alert citizens. Fred Dockins of radio station KMIS, president of the club, explained the weather watch program that has been organized and is being maintained by citizen band radio operators.

A representative from the Bootheel Regional Planning Commission at Malden discussed new procedures mainly pertaining to zoning requirements and the board agreed to take whatever action is necessary to meet the requirements.

Bill Brown and Jim Stafford, representing Parkview Acres Inc. presented the plat for approval of improvements to the subdivision. They were told by the board that the plat should be corrected to show that Meatte and LeSieur streets will be continued through the subdivisions and to return to the next meeting with the corrected plat for approval.

June 16 was set for a special meeting to award a bid for the resurfacing of Foster St.
